

IT'S OUR NATURE®
Moving in the Rhythm of Nature®

Harriet Beecher Stowe shaped her place in history when she courageously expanded a short story about the death of an old slave into a novel. Uncle Tom's Cabin, written in 1852 is considered one of the most influential books of modern history.

Later in her life, Harriet became Florida's first travel writer, exposing the people of the North to the wild nature of her winter home. "Oranges from Harriet Beecher Stowe, Mandarin, Florida" stamped on crates shipped north beckoned the adventurous.

In the winter she wrote a series of essays to the publisher under the title of Palmetto Leaves describing the land and people of Florida. Harriet had created what is now the most promotional travel writing in the world. Palmetto Leaves essays were published in 1873.

Thank you Harriet Beecher Stowe for your ability to write about the human condition and the natural world with such detail and insight, to stop, take notice, and act.
